

Personal Data Step-By-Step

PREPARE YOUR COMPANY FOR THE NEW
GENERAL DATA PROTECTION REGULATION

General Data Protection Regulation

The publication of the new General Data Protection Regulation on 4 May 2016 is the most important event in the last 20 years of personal data protection regulation.

The old rules predated the explosion of the Internet and the arrival of the digital economy we live in today. Inevitably, this means the changes introduced by the Regulation are wide-ranging and will affect most companies.

Privacy by design and privacy by default, the obligation to appoint a data protection officer, rules on data pseudonymisation, changes to the rules on obtaining consent, new rules on consent by minors, the elimination of the notification and authorisation system, the implementation of the right to be forgotten, the creation of additional obligations for subcontractors, the introduction of very high fines and information obligations relating to breaches of security, are some of the changes introduced by the new legislation. The Regulation establishes a 2-year transitional period, which comes into force on 25 May 2018.

What does the service include?

PLMJ has launched this new service to help companies adapt to the new data protection regulation and understand and apply the new rules, so they can create and develop a data protection compliance culture.

The new Regulation represents a huge change because personal data will no longer be a specific concern, but will take on a central role in the organisation of companies and how they work.

The concept of privacy by design and privacy by default provide that personal data protection must be considered in all processes and departments of a company.

To prepare companies to adapt to the new data protection regulation, this service includes a number of materials and tools that will help companies comply with the new rules. These include an operational guide, training for lawyers and non-lawyers, and a hotline for data protection officers.

Protect yourself using the best specialists.

PLMJ has a unique team of lawyers dedicated to the telecommunications, media and information technology sectors (TMT), and this team is perfectly placed to offer an integrated approach characterised by the same quality of services the firm provides to all its clients.

The team has extensive experience in providing legal advice to Portuguese and international companies, operators and investors from the telecommunications, media and information technology sectors. The legal support they provide covers a wide range of areas from regulation of electronic communications, television and media, acquisition and licensing of software, to e-commerce, data protection, supply of hardware, outsourcing of IT systems and electronic signatures.

PLMJ also has a solid track record in providing legal advice on data protection matters. This experience includes:

- Preparing and presenting notifications and requests for authorisation to the Portuguese Data Protection Commission (“CNPD”) and dealing with all administrative steps in these processes;
- Involvement in complex international data transfer projects;
- Carrying out audits to check compliance with the law;
- Litigation relating to decisions of the CNPD;
- Negotiation of contracts (outsourcing, subcontracting, listbroking, and transfer and communication of data).

The law on protection of personal data is very wide-ranging and affects most companies that operate in Portugal across many aspects of their business. Unfortunately, this situation is ignored by a significant number of companies and failure to comply with the law can lead to both administrative and criminal penalties.
