LEGAL AND POLICY FRAMEWORK

Legislation

Has your jurisdiction enacted any primary or secondary legislation addressing environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors in banking, finance and corporate law, or legislation addressing the pursuit of other non-financial objectives by companies and investors?

The following legislation addressing ESG factors has been adopted:

- of 28 July on the disclosure of non-financial information and information on diversity by large companies and groups, which transposes the Non-Financial Reporting Directive (Directive 2014/95/EU). In particular, this decree-law amended the Portuguese Securities Code and the Portuguese Commercial Companies Code by setting out, with respect to public interest companies, certain information duties relating to non-financial information and internal diversity policies, as follows:
 - on the one hand, the annual management report of these companies must include non-financial statements with sufficient information to allow an understanding of the evolution, performance, position and impact of the company's activities. It must also include references to environmental, social and employee matters, as well as information relating to the balance between women and men, non-discrimination, respect for human rights, and combating corruption and bribery attempts; and
 - on the other hand, these companies must now also include a reference to internal diversity policies in the annual governance report. This report must include a description of the main objectives of such policies and the relevant measures applicable in this regard to the management and supervisory boards notably as regards age, gender, education and professional background. It must also include a description of how the policies have been applied and their results in a given reference period.
- Law No. 62/2017 of 1 August on the balanced gender representation in the management and supervisory bodies of public sector entities and of listed companies, setting out certain thresholds for the appointment of members of each gender for those corporate bodies.
- Decree-Law No. 109-H/2021 of 10 December, which approves investment companies' legal framework. Investment companies are required to consider sustainability risks regarding any event or condition of an environmental, social or governance nature, the occurrence of which is likely to cause an actual or potential significant negative impact on the value of the investment.
- of 20 July, approving the legal regime of conception, marketing and rendering of consultancy services regarding structured deposits, as amended by Decree-Law No. 109-H/2021 of 10 December. After 22 November 2022:
 - when creating structured deposits, credit institutions that are authorised to receive deposits from the public must ensure the incorporation of sustainability objectives in the identification of the target audience and in the assessment of the suitability of the structured deposits to the target audience's interests, needs, characteristics and objectives. They must also ensure the availability to the entities that market or advise on the structured deposits of all information, in a clear and objective manner, about the sustainability factors of the financial instruments, and their suitability in terms of the sustainability objectives of the clients, whenever applicable; and
 - credit institutions that are authorised to receive deposits from the public when marketing structured deposits, as well as entities that provide advisory services on structured deposits, must ensure the incorporation of sustainability objectives in the assessment of the compatibility of the structured deposits they market with the needs, characteristics and objectives of the clients they intend to approach, also taking into account the target audience identified for such deposits.
- The - disclosure obligations for listed companies are mandatory, including as regards the remuneration policy, a

- remuneration report and a corporate governance annual report;
- after 22 November 2022, companies that produce investment products must incorporate sustainability objectives in the identification of the target audience and in the assessment of the suitability of the investment products to the target audience's interests, needs, characteristics and objectives. They must also ensure the availability to the entities that distribute these investment products of all information, in a clear and objective manner, about the sustainability factors of the investment products, and their suitability in terms of the sustainability objectives of the clients, whenever applicable; and
- after 22 November 2022, companies that distribute investment products must ensure the incorporation of sustainability objectives in the assessment of the compatibility of the investment products they distribute with the needs, characteristics and objectives of the clients they intend to approach, also taking into account the target audience identified for those investment products.
- of 31 December. This law published the new climate framework law, which approved the grounds for the climate policy. This law:
 - imposes a general duty of non-harm to climate and environmental balance;
 - applies to any private company;
 - requires the state to maintain a national inventory on greenhouse gas, still to be further regulated;
 - sets out the guiding principles applicable to financial policies, financial management and support to capitalisation and financing, these being: prioritisation; identification, transparency; accountability; and prudence and disinvestment;
 - imposes the obligation of considering, in the financing decisions, climate risk and impacts;
 - imposes obligations on companies to consider climate change within their corporate governance and to incorporate the analysis of climate risk into their decision-making processes, as well as disclosure obligations. Moreover, directors' duties of care, of loyalty and of reporting the management and presenting the financial statements must include the consideration and disclosure of the climate change risk to the business, capital structure and assets of the company. These obligations will be developed by complementary legislation.

The law establishes a set of programmatic principles and norms whose execution depends on the issuance of other laws and regulations.

- The Labour Code, enacted by Law No. 7/2009 of 12 February, which prohibits any forms of discrimination based on sexual orientation, gender, ethnic origin, or political or religious conviction. It also makes extensive provisions concerning the protection of workers' health, the work environment and the work of minors.
- Law 60/2018 of 21 August, which promotes gender salary equality and requires companies to set up gender-neutral salary policies and document salary differences so that they are to provide the corresponding reasoning when questioned by labour authorities.
- Law 4/2019 of 10 January, which requires companies with more than 75 employees to employ 1 per cent or 2 per cent of employees with a degree of incapacity of 60 per cent or more, depending on whether the company has, respectively, less or more than 100 workers.
- Law 93/2021 of 20 December, which will enter into force on 18 June 2022. This law aims to provide for the protection of persons reporting certain breaches, namely breaches of union law or breaches related to money laundering and terrorist financing, environment, radiation and nuclear safety or public health laws.

Policy guidance and development

How would you describe the general level of policy guidance and development regarding ESG, impact investing and purpose-driven companies in your jurisdiction?

Although sustainability and environmental matters seem to be increasingly on the agenda of policymakers and regulators, the level of policy guidance implementation and development regarding ESG, impact investing and purpose-driven companies within the Portuguese jurisdiction is still embryonic, with limited legislation and regulations being enacted in this regard. The applicable regulation in this regard is mostly that which is approved at European level. The private sector, however, seems to be the driving force from an organisational perspective for the implementation of common goals and policies throughout the sector. In this regard, associations such as the local chapter of the Business Council for Sustainable Development (BCSD Portugal) bring together some of the largest corporate players in the Portuguese market, and have set up various working groups to monitor and contribute to the development of ESG policies, develop knowledge, promote debate and sensitise companies to the importance of ESG matters.

INVESTMENT

Regulatory and fiduciary duties

Are institutional investors and financial intermediaries legally required to consider ESG factors when making investment decisions? Must any additional non-financial principles and objectives be considered?

On 10 March 2021, Regulation (EU) 2019/2088 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 27 November 2019 on sustainability-related disclosures in the financial services sector (the Regulation), became, in its majority, directly applicable in the legal systems across the European Union, including in Portugal.

The Regulation establishes certain harmonised transparency rules applicable to financial market participants and financial advisers in relation to the management of the financial risks arising from climate change, resource depletion, environmental degradation and social issues. It thus imposes the consideration of ESG factors in their investment decisions.

Within its scope, the Regulation sets out certain transparency duties in the way financial market players take into account sustainability risks in their investment decisions or investment advisory activities. Thus, with the entry into force of the Regulation, those involved in the financial market and financial advisers are bound by transparency duties relating to:

- integration of certain risks related to an event or condition of an environmental, social or governance nature whose occurrence is likely to cause an actual or potential significant negative impact on the value of the investment;
- consideration of the impact of investment decisions and advice that results in negative effects on environmental, social and labour issues, and also on respect for human rights, and the fight against corruption and bribery; and
- provision of information relating to sustainability in relation to financial products.

In fact, pursuant to the Regulation, financial market participants must not only provide on their websites information relating to their policies on integrating sustainability risks into their investment decision-making process, but also provide information on the negative entity-level impacts of investment decisions on sustainability factors.

In addition, under Commission Delegated Regulation (EU) 2021/1253 of 21 April 2021 amending Delegated Regulation (EU) No. 2017/565 as regards the integration of sustainability factors, risks and preferences into certain organisational requirements and operating conditions for investment firms, financial intermediaries will be required to include ESG risks in their risk management procedures. Moreover, the assessment of the suitability of the financial products to the client will have to include sustainability preferences. In addition, financial advisers will have to describe the sustainability factors taken into consideration in the selection process of financial instruments. This legal act will enter into force on 2 August 2022.

Decree-Law No. 109-H/2021 of 10 December, which approves investment companies' legal framework, requires investment companies to consider sustainability risks regarding any event or condition of an environmental, social or governance nature, the occurrence of which is likely to cause an actual or potential significant negative impact on the value of the investment.

Moreover, Commission Delegated Regulation (EU) 2021/1255 of 21 April 2021, amending Delegated Regulation (EU) No. 231/2013 as regards the sustainability risks and sustainability factors to be taken into account by Alternative Investment Fund Managers (AIFMs), requires AIFMs to take into account sustainability risks when complying with due diligence obligations, as well as, where AIFMs consider principal adverse impacts of investment decisions on sustainability factors as described in the Regulation, such principal adverse impacts. Moreover, sustainability risks must be included in the risk management procedures. This legal act will enter into force on 2 August 2022.

Besides the above, there are no other specific legal obligations pursuant to Portuguese law that require institutional investors and financial intermediaries to consider ESG factors in their investment decisions. This, however, does not prevent them from considering ESG factors voluntarily.

Law stated - 11 July 2022

Voluntary standards and best practices

What voluntary standards and best practices are commonly followed in your jurisdiction with regard to integrating ESG factors and other non-financial principles into investment decisions?

The most common voluntary standards and best practices used in the Portuguese market are the UN Principles for Responsible Investment, the Impact Management Project, IRIS metrics, the Task Force on Climate-related Financial Disclosures, and the UN Sustainable Development Goals (UN SDGs).

Law stated - 11 July 2022

Measurement, reporting and disclosure

What voluntary and statutory measurement, reporting and disclosure frameworks are followed in your jurisdiction with regard to ESG and other non-financial factors?

The most common voluntary reporting and disclosure frameworks are the Global Reporting Initiative Standards, the guidelines for integrated reports of the International Integrated Reporting Council and the Sustainability Accounting Standards Board (SASB).

Furthermore, although not a framework per se, in February 2021 the Portuguese Securities Market Commission approved a reporting template for compliance with the duty to disclose non-financial information by companies issuing securities admitted to trading on a regulated market. In particular, these companies are subject to certain reporting obligations in relation to non-financial information. They also must implement internal diversity policies under Decree-Law No. 89/2017 of 28 July, which transposes Directive 2014/95/EU into Portuguese law. This template is a voluntary model, which seeks to standardise information on existing legal duties and contribute to the existence of standardised information on matters relating to the integration of sustainability factors into Portuguese business activity.

Law stated - 11 July 2022

Ratings, indices and guidelines

What ratings, indices and guidelines are used to benchmark adherence to ESG principles and other non-financial factors in your jurisdiction?

The most common ratings and indices used in the Portuguese market to benchmark adherence to ESG principles are:

- Climate Disclosure Project scoring, which scores a given company in accordance with its environmental impact;
- Sustainalytics, whose ratings are based on the ESG risks of companies; and
- MSCI ESG, which measures a company's resilience to long-term ESG risks.

Law stated - 11 July 2022

Incentives, benefits and financial support

Are any fiscal incentives or other benefits available in your jurisdiction to encourage institutional investors and financial intermediaries to integrate ESG and other non-financial factors into their investment decision-making?

Currently, there are no fiscal incentives or other benefits to encourage integrating ESG and other non-financial factors into investment decision-making by institutional investors or financial intermediaries.

Law stated - 11 July 2022

Impact investing

In addition to ESG factors, what considerations and practices are commonly integrated into impact investment strategies?

Besides ESG factors, standard considerations and practices usually accounted for in impact investment strategies are also integrated, in particular, to optimise the intended social or environmental impact of the investment, such as determination of the goal, strategy and subject of the investment, carrying out the due diligence for the investment, and analysing not only the financing associated with the investment but also the return expectations. In fact, these considerations also comprise an assessment of the impact upside and how it relates to the revenue strategy of the company, how aligned the incentives of the management team towards impact considerations are, the contribution to the UN SDGs at the sub-indicator level and the assessment of the net impact, which takes into account negative impacts that occur as a result of the investment.

PURPOSE-DRIVEN COMPANIES

Legal recognition and certification

What legal forms or statuses are used in your jurisdiction to establish purpose-driven companies?

The following legal forms have been created in the Portuguese jurisdiction for the establishment of purpose-driven companies:

- social entrepreneurship companies: these are for-profit companies, regulated under Law No. 18/2015 of 4 March and subject to the supervision of the Portuguese Securities Market Commission (CMVM), with the main corporate purpose of carrying out investment within social entrepreneurship, specifically by allocating the funds collected for investment in entities that develop appropriate solutions to social problems. The companies may also manage social entrepreneurship funds;
- social entrepreneurship funds: these are collective investment schemes, also regulated under Law No. 18/2015 and subject to the supervision of CMVM, regarding which the amounts collected from the investors are also aimed at investing in social entrepreneurship, through the acquisition of shares, bonds or other instruments issued or related to entities that develop appropriate solutions to social problems, in accordance with the investment policy defined for each fund. These funds may be managed by social entrepreneurship companies or other fund management companies; and
- foundations: these are defined as not-for-profit legal persons under Law No. 24/2012 of 9 July, and have a specific purpose relating to social interest. In other words, they provide benefits to a group of people (other than the founder of the foundation and other related persons). The applicable law sets out a non-comprehensive list of examples of what may be deemed social interest. The list includes cooperation for development as well as promotion of environmental protection. The creation of the foundations is officially recognised by the Portuguese Presidency of the Council of Ministers (PCM), which has certain supervisory duties in relation to foundations.

In addition to the types of entities mentioned above, any commercial company may pursue ESG goals and objectives in accordance with its corporate purpose. In fact, this seems to be the most common type of purpose-driven entity as, even though Law 18/2015 of 4 March has been in force since 2015, as of today, there is only one social entrepreneurship company and one social entrepreneurship fund authorised and incorporated in Portugal.

There is no public certification of any of the companies above, but B Corporation certification is becoming increasingly relevant in Portugal. Under this certification, the corporate positive social or environmental impact is measured and certified by the US entity B Lab (through B Lab Portugal). In fact, while there are only a handful of B Corp companies in Portugal, these tend to be general commercial companies, which also pursue ESG-related corporate purposes, rather than any of the legal types of purpose-driven entities listed above.

Law stated - 11 July 2022

Purpose and mission

What rules and standard practices govern the establishment of companies' social or environmental purposes and mission?

Companies may pursue social or environmental purposes in accordance with the purpose set out in their articles of association. However, under Portuguese law, commercial companies have as their main purpose the pursuit of commercial activities. They thus place shareholders' interests at the very heart of their corporate purpose.

Conversely, foundations, regulated by Law No. 24/2012 of 9 July, do not have as their mission the pursuit of commercial activities, but rather the pursuit of a given significant social interest duly identified from incorporation. In fact, these entities are subject to an official recognition by the PCM, which not only initially analyses a memorandum describing the purposes of the foundation, but also has the capacity to determine the extinction of a given foundation when the activities carried out demonstrate that the real purpose of the foundation is not aligned with the purpose at the origin of its creation. Pursuant to this legal framework, any amendment to the aims and purposes of a foundation always requires approval by the PCM, as proposed by the foundation's board of directors.

Social entrepreneurship companies and social entrepreneurship funds are purpose-driven companies and their activity is intrinsically orientated towards the social or environmental purposes and missions as set out in their constitutional documents. The pursuit of social and environmental purposes by their management remains, however, subject to fiduciary duties towards investors and other stakeholders, without prejudice to their profit-making purpose.

Law stated - 11 July 2022

Profit distribution, winding up and remuneration

What rules and restrictions govern profit distributions for purpose-driven companies in your jurisdiction?

Social entrepreneurship companies and social entrepreneurship funds do not have any restrictions in relation to profit distribution, except those that may be specifically agreed with their fund participants and set out in their corporate documentation or investment policy.

As regards foundations, given their specific legal nature under Portuguese law, notably the fact that they are not incorporated by shareholders but rather by a founder (or founders) that is not a stakeholder, any surplus amounts will not be distributed but rather reallocated to the foundation's social purposes.

Law stated - 11 July 2022

What rules and restrictions govern the winding up of purpose-driven companies?

Social entrepreneurship companies and social entrepreneurship funds are not subject to any restrictions in relation to their winding up with regard to an obligation to pass on their remaining assets to similar entities, except those that may be specifically set out in their corporate documentation or in the fund's rules of procedure.

However, Law No. 24/2012 of 9 July does set out specific rules in relation to the winding up of foundations, in particular relating to the allocation of the entity's assets upon its extinction, because these assets must be distributed to an association or foundation with similar social interest purposes and must not, in any event, be transferred back to the founder that set up the foundation.

Law stated - 11 July 2022

What rules and restrictions govern the remuneration of directors, officers, employees and third parties?

No specific restrictions apply to the remuneration of directors, officers, employees and third parties of any social entrepreneurship companies, social entrepreneurship funds or privately owned foundations. Consequently, purpose-driven companies (and their shareholders) have ample discretion to set the remuneration of their directors, officers and employees.

Foundations are subject to restrictions regarding employees' salaries when they have public utility status. State-owned foundations are also subject to restrictions regarding employees' salaries.

Law stated - 11 July 2022

Measurement, benchmarking and reporting

Are purpose-driven companies legally required to measure, benchmark and report the social and environmental impact of their business?

Law No. 24/2012 of 9 July requires foundations to draft and have available at all times on their websites the activity reports for the past three years.

There are no further requirements in this regard in relation to social entrepreneurship companies or social entrepreneurship funds. This is without prejudice to the undertaking agreed between social entrepreneurship companies, as management companies of social entrepreneurship funds and investors, to ensure ongoing reporting based on pre-established metrics proposed by the management company and approved by an independent advisory board.

Law stated - 11 July 2022

What statutory and voluntary standards, guidelines and best practices are followed by purpose-driven companies in your jurisdiction with regard to the measurement and reporting of ESG and other non-financial factors?

The most common voluntary standards, guidelines and best practices considered by purpose-driven companies in Portugal are the Global Reporting Initiative Standards, the Task Force on Climate-related Financial Disclosures, IRIS metrics, the guidelines for integrated reports of the International Integrated Reporting Council, the Sustainability Accounting Standards Board and the UN Global Compact.

Law stated - 11 July 2022

Director liability and private enforcement

What rules govern the liability of directors of purpose-driven companies for compliance with social and environmental standards and principles? In addition to shareholders, are stakeholders entitled to hold directors accountable through private enforcement action?

There is no general duty for directors to ensure socially responsible behaviour by companies. However, Portuguese law sets out a few obligations on directors to comply with legislation addressing environmental, social and governance factors in banking, finance and corporate law.

The Commercial Companies Code (CSC) does not contain any rule that directly holds directors accountable for compliance with social and environmental standards and principles. However, the fiduciary duties determine that directors must take into account 'the long-term interests of the shareholders' and must 'weigh the interests of other persons relevant to the sustainability of the company, such as its employees, clients and creditors'. In addition, under Law 98/2021 of 31 December, directors' fiduciary duties encompass the consideration and disclosure of the climate change risk to the business, capital structure and assets of the company. Further steps to harmonise the CSC with the provisions of Law 98/2021 of 31 December are expected to be taken in 2023.

In other words, although the CSC determines a certain level of supremacy between the interests of shareholders and stakeholders, it is still necessary for directors to understand that the consideration of stakeholders' interests is often a necessary step to pursue the corporate interest. Directors should therefore favour the interests of stakeholders, whenever (and insofar as) these favour the corporate interest. Faced with two solutions with equal effects (equally beneficial) for the interests of shareholders, directors should adopt the one which is also beneficial (or more beneficial) to the interests of other stakeholders.

In addition, when directors breach their fiduciary duties, they are only contractually liable towards the company, given the circumstances, and not towards the stakeholders. Therefore, the stakeholders harmed by the breach of directors' duties are in a situation of extra-contractual civil liability and consequently will further need to prove the existence of a culpable fact, the damage caused, and the relationship between the director's conduct and the damage caused.

Law stated - 11 July 2022

State supervision

Is there any form of state supervision of purpose-driven companies in relation to their social and environmental purposes?

In general, purpose-driven companies are not subject to state supervision, with the exception of certain aspects of the life of non-profit third sector entities (including the public interest recognition in the case of foundations), which are indeed subject to state supervision.

As regards foundations specifically, there is also some level of supervision. In fact, these entities are required to provide information on their activities annually, including financial statements and activity reports, to the Portuguese Presidency of the Council of Ministers – the governmental department that officially recognises the creation of foundations. This governmental body is also able to determine the extinction of a given foundation in specific circumstances set out in Law No. 24/2012 of 9 July, notably when the activities carried out demonstrate that the real purpose of the foundation is not in line with the purpose provided for upon its creation.

Additionally, social entrepreneurship funds and companies specifically are subject to supervision by the Portuguese Securities Market Commission (CMVM). In fact, CMVM's authorisation or registration, as applicable, is required as a prior condition to begin their activity, and their ongoing activity is subject to CMVM's scrutiny. Nevertheless, the current regulatory framework applicable to such entities overlaps, in essence, with that of venture capital funds and companies. For this reason, it remains to be seen what level of intervention CMVM will apply in the future with regard to its supervision of the actual pursuit of social and environmental purposes and, in this respect, whether CMVM will issue further implementing regulations capable of clearly detailing and ensuring ever-closer scrutiny of the pursuit of such objectives, including with regard to impact measurement and reporting.

Law stated - 11 July 2022

Incentives and benefits

Are any fiscal incentives or other benefits available for purpose-driven companies in your jurisdiction? What is the scope of these benefits and what requirements apply?

There are no tax benefits specifically aimed at purpose-driven companies, but rather a set of benefits which may be applied to such companies with social or environmental purposes and missions. An outline of the main tax benefits is provided below:

- SIFIDE II is a beneficial tax regime, set out under the Investment Tax Code, providing for corporate income tax credits for expenditures incurred in research and development activities.

- RFAI is another regime, also set out under the Investment Tax Code, according to which companies may deduct a percentage of their expenditures on investment in non-current assets.
- Several one-off and more environmentally focused benefits may be conferred. For example, exemption from vehicle taxes for companies opting for an electric fleet, deduction of the VAT on its acquisition, advantages regarding depreciation, etc.
- Although the tax regime applicable to social entrepreneurship funds is not clear, the market approach is that the venture capital funds tax regime should apply (namely, full exemption at the level of the fund, with taxation being applied upon distribution or exit by investors).
- A range of tax incentives is granted to environmental patronage (donations generally considered as a deductible expense of the year at 120 per cent of its value), as well as to taxpayers who directly carry out an economic activity of a forestry or forest nature – the latter focused on management of forest resources, particularly aimed at forest fire defence operations (a recurring problem in Portugal) or adaptation to climate change – comprising a corporate income tax exemption for collective investment schemes (CIS) in forest resources, and reduced taxation (10 per cent) for income from participation units or shareholdings in CIS paid to its holders, as well as to capital gains deriving from their disposal (among other exemptions applicable to property acquisition for those intended purposes).

Finally, it is also worth highlighting that certain tax benefits relevant for purpose-driven companies have recently expired or will expire next year (eg, the deduction of expenditure with car and bike-sharing systems, expenditure on bike fleets, etc).

Law stated - 11 July 2022

Public procurement

Do the public procurement rules and policies in your jurisdiction confer any advantages on companies for pursuing social or environmental purposes? If so, what conditions apply?

The public procurement legal framework has been amended recently to also take into consideration the pursuit of social and environmental purposes. Specifically, under the new legal framework, the possibility of including social and environmental purposes in the tender documents, of considering their insufficient accomplishment as an excluding factor, or of taking social and environmental factors into account in the award decision itself, have all been expressly provided for.

In short, under this new mindset, contracting authorities have been granted ample room to consider the accomplishment of ESG purposes in their award decisions, thus putting flesh on the bones of the general ESG principles in a field that has considerable significance within the Portuguese economy. This breadth of action granted to awarding bodies when devising each public procurement procedure should be exercised bearing in mind the environmental commitments undertaken in the National Action Strategy on Green Public Procurement adopted back in 2016, which lays down ambitious milestones and objectives for the public administration.

This trend was reinforced in the climate framework law, which, in the context of public investment and public procurement, establishes: (1) the principle that the acquisition of goods and services obeys sustainability criteria, taking into account the respective impact on the local economy and promoting the use of locally available materials; (2) a state guarantee that, progressively up to 2030, all public assets will respect the principles of the EU taxonomy on environmentally sustainable activities; (3) the divestment by the state of shares in companies or activities that do not comply with those principles; (4) a preference in the financing of projects, contracting of services or concession of public services, exclusively or partially, that comply with the principles of the taxonomy on environmentally sustainable activities of the European Union; and (5) the submission of the largest public investments to a strategic evaluation that deals with the risks associated with climate change in national and sector-by-sector planning and economic investment decisions.

Law stated - 11 July 2022

Economic sustainability and market competition

How would you describe the level of economic sustainability and market competition of purpose-driven companies?

Overall, purpose-driven companies are subject to the same economic sustainability and market competition conditions as non-purpose-driven companies.

For instance, purpose-driven companies do not benefit from a more favourable tax environment, as the existing tax benefits are not specifically targeted to them. Although there was a green tax reform in Portugal in 2015, the steps taken fall short of current demand and further action is required. Furthermore, no specific rules currently apply to purpose-driven companies with regard to distribution of profits, measurements or reporting costs.

Based on the foregoing, it remains to be seen whether, due to the absence of adequate incentives, the current level of economic sustainability will ensure a true level playing field between purpose-driven and non-purpose-driven companies. In any event, it is perceived that purpose-driven companies draw enhanced economic sustainability from their ability to: (1) attract better talent, which results in less staff turnover and more productivity; (2) have better consumer engagement, which represents a lower customer acquisition cost and a higher lifetime value; and (3) have lower costs of capital given the transition in asset allocation towards sustainable assets.

GOVERNMENT, NGO AND SUPRANATIONAL SUPPORT

Government support

Are there any governmental actors in your jurisdiction that are specifically dedicated to promoting and supporting socially and environmentally responsible investment practices, as well as purpose-driven companies? What purposes do they pursue and how do they do so?

Within the Portuguese government, the main duties of several ministries include the promotion of socially and environmentally responsible investment practices. These ministries include the ministry of economy, the ministry of employment and social security, and the ministry of environment and climate change.

Portuguese law also defines a wide range of public entities that are subject to climate action, such as the public institutions, public companies, autonomous regions, local authorities and their public associations, the Climate Action Council established by the climate framework law, as well as independent administrative bodies that regulate economic activity. Specifically concerning environmental matters the Portuguese Environment Agency (APA), which is a public institute, within the scope of the Portuguese Environment and Climate Action Ministry plays an essential role in proposing, developing and monitoring public policies for the environment and sustainable development, in an integrated and participative manner, and in close cooperation with other sector-specific policies and public and private entities.

Moreover, several public agencies play a pivotal role in the promotion of social and environmental investment practices. The former PME Investimentos, which has recently been merged by incorporation into the Portuguese Development Bank (BPF), a publicly held financial institution subject to the Bank of Portugal's supervision, has as its corporate purpose the promotion of entrepreneurship, innovation, competitiveness and internationalisation within the Portuguese business fabric. It does this by developing equity, quasi-equity and debt instruments, and also seeks to leverage private investment in key areas and thus multiply its reach and economic impact. Among the several funds created are the Social Innovation Fund (FIS), which promotes innovative and sustainable practices through both equity and debt instruments, including through the issuance of social impact bonds, and the Coinvestment Fund, which is a coinvestment fund that matches private investment in high-potential innovative start-ups. Furthermore, one of the key roles of the BPF is to promote, and overcome shortcomings with regard to, green finance within the Portuguese economy. Finally, while the public agency that issues and manages Portuguese sovereign debt (IGCP), is yet to perform its inaugural green sovereign bonds issuance, this could prove to be a key milestone and turning point regarding the adherence by private and public entities to sustainable green finance.

In addition to an overall strong presence of public resources in this sector, and to the growing private interest in impact investment, traditional organisations, including non-profit associations, religious charities and cooperatives continue to play a fundamental role within the third sector.

In order to provide easy access to clear information regarding climate change, there is a plan to create a climate action website, which should be operational by February 2023. This will be a public digital tool, free and accessible via the internet, that will enable citizens and civil society to participate in climate action.

NGO support

Are there any non-governmental organisations (NGOs) operating in your jurisdiction that are specifically dedicated to promoting and supporting socially and environmentally responsible investment practices, as well as purpose-driven companies? What purposes do they pursue and how do they do so?

There are several NGOs operating in Portugal that are specifically dedicated to promoting socially and environmentally responsible investment practices. Associations such as the local chapter of the Business Council for Sustainable Development (BCSD Portugal) bring together some of the largest corporate players in the Portuguese market and have set up different working groups with the goal to monitor and contribute to the development of ESG policies, develop knowledge, promote debate and sensitise companies to the importance of ESG matters.

B Corporation Certification, through B Lab Portugal, measures companies' entire social and environmental performance and is another example of an NGO that continues to play a key role in the support of socially and environmentally responsible investment practices.

Other relevant players – although not NGOs – in the promotion in Portugal of socially and environmentally responsible investments include IES Social Business School (a post-graduate school providing impact investment-driven programmes), Stone Soup (an international impact investment consultancy firm), Fundação Calouste Gulbenkian (a Lisbon-based foundation whose purpose is to improve quality of life through art, charity, science and education), Mustard Seed Maze – Sociedade de Empreendedorismo Social, S.A. (a social entrepreneurship company regulated by the Portuguese Securities Commission), Core Angels (social entrepreneurship business angels), Impact Hub (a network focused on building entrepreneurial communities for impact at scale), and NOVA Centre on Business, Human Rights and the Environment (a knowledge centre within NOVA School of Law that develops awareness-raising and capacity-building projects to foster responsible business conduct).

Supranational support

Are there any supranational actors operating in your jurisdiction that are specifically dedicated to promoting and supporting socially and environmentally responsible investment practices, as well as purpose-driven companies? What purposes do they pursue and how do they do so?

The Global Steering Group (GSC) for Impact Investment has a presence in Portugal, which was one of the first countries to join this group (in 2015). The mission of this independent global steering group is to drive real impact that improves lives and the planet by innovating, agitating and orchestrating the advance toward impact economies. GSC continues to play a leading role in the development and acceleration of the impact ecosystem in Portugal, and the success of its mission stems from its advocacy efforts with regard to governing bodies to create and catalyse awareness of the need to include impact investment on the public agenda.

The European Venture Philanthropy Association (EVPA) – a community of organisations (including social investors, private equity and impact investment funds) interested in venture philanthropy and social investment across Europe – is also very active in Portugal, one of the countries with the most EVPA members. The EVPA is an European forum that brings together key players within the impact investment landscape, creating an ongoing impact-driven dialogue and promoting impact through numerous training and research initiatives.

FINANCIAL TOOLS

Equity funds and loans

Does your jurisdiction regulate equity funds or other financial tools such as loans designed to scale up companies with social or environmental objectives? Even if not expressly regulated, are there venture funds specifically focused on investing in purpose-driven companies?

The enactment of Law No. 18/2015 of 4 March extended the scope of the venture capital legal framework to social entrepreneurship funds and companies. With the approval of this law, both equity funds and companies aimed at promoting social entrepreneurship became specially regulated in Portugal. Despite a significant overlap with the legal framework applicable to venture capital companies and funds, a specific set of rules applies to equity funds and companies whose purpose is to promote social entrepreneurship.

In a nutshell, social entrepreneurship investment is defined as investment in the acquisition of equity or debt instruments issued by entities developing appropriate solutions to address social issues, with the objective of achieving quantifiable and positive social impact. Both social entrepreneurship funds and companies follow the set of rules applicable to entities falling below the threshold (ie, with assets under management below €100 million when leverage is used, or of €500 million for unleveraged funds), stemming from the Portuguese legislation that implemented the EU Directive on Alternative Investment Fund Managers (Directive 2011/61/EU). The Portuguese Securities Market Commission has defined the rules applicable to the evaluation of assets held by social entrepreneurship funds and companies, and specified which assets may comprise their estate (having aligned it with Regulation (EU) No. 346/2013 on European social entrepreneurship funds).

The inaugural social entrepreneurship company (Mustard Seed Maze – Sociedade de Empreendedorismo Social, S.A.) and fund (Mustard Seed Maze - Social Entrepreneurship Fund I (MSM Fund)) were registered back in 2018 and 2019, respectively. Since then, the MSM Fund has been deploying capital in Portugal and throughout Europe to help address pressing environmental and social issues. The MSM Fund is co-invested by the European Investment Fund, and harbours a uniquely diverse set of institutional investors.

Outcomes funds

Does your jurisdiction regulate 'pay for success' investing models such as outcomes funds? Apart from specific regulation, are any of these mechanisms in force or in progress in your jurisdiction?

At present, outcome funds are not regulated in Portugal. Indeed, while social entrepreneurship funds and companies are regulated in the Portuguese jurisdiction, the applicable legal framework is silent with regard to requiring investment models to be structured based on outcome.

This being said, due to the perceived relevance to the ethos of impact investment, regulated impact investment players in Portugal do currently link profitability and management incentives (through receipt of carried interest) to achieving pre-determined outcomes and results, according to pre-determined metrics that have been approved by investors.

Social and development impact bonds

Does your jurisdiction regulate 'pay for success' investing models such as social impact bonds and development impact bonds? Apart from specific regulation, are any of these mechanisms in force or in progress in your jurisdiction?

Pay for success investment models are currently not regulated in Portugal. Despite this lack of specific regulation, recent years have seen a considerable rise in the number of issuances of social impact bonds and development impact bonds. The Social Innovation Fund (FIS) in particular has been quite active in this field, with the adoption of pay for success investing models that are orientated towards attaining predetermined social objectives and targets.

Furthermore, social impact bonds benefit from a tax incentive introduced back in 2018, whereby cash inflows from social investors are recognised as expenses and losses for the relevant tax period, in an amount corresponding to 130 per cent of the total or up to a cap of 0.8 per cent of the sales turnover or turnover in services, regardless of any future reimbursements. To this effect, social investors are private, public or social economy entities, with philanthropic or commercial objectives, that contribute financial resources to the development of an initiative of innovation and social entrepreneurship, with the objective of obtaining social impact. The aim of these measures is to create the right incentives to boost investment in social and environmental projects.

Crowdfunding

Does your jurisdiction regulate crowdfunding initiatives aimed at scaling up companies with social or environmental objectives?

Crowdfunding is a regulated activity pursuant to Law No. 102/2015 of 24 August. This legal framework draws a distinction between equity, debt crowdfunding and crowdfunding entailing a donation, and each type is subject to a different set of rules. Having said this, impact investment crowdfunding in particular does not benefit from separate rules. By way of example, Power Parity is a crowdfunding platform manager specifically focused on promoting debt crowdfunding of companies pursuing environmental and social goals, but that is currently subject to the same legal framework as other debt crowdfunding platforms.

UPDATE AND TRENDSUpdate and trends

What are the key recent developments, hot topics and future trends in your jurisdiction relating to social finance, purpose-driven companies and the impact economy in general? Are there any recent studies and initiatives to identify or quantify these market sectors? Are there any new or proposed regulations or taxonomies in this regard?

The increasing traction of green finance within the Portuguese economy has been a key trend over recent years, including landmark green bonds issuances by two key players in the capital markets sector. The increasingly mainstream nature of green finance solutions is a trend to watch closely over the coming years, including the much-anticipated inaugural sovereign green bonds issuance.

Additionally, the corporate governance impact of ESG-related concerns has been a noteworthy factor in recent years, and it is expected that this impact will be increasingly present in the daily life of companies in general. In fact, from public procurement to the ongoing activity of regulated entities (including banks), the dissemination of ESG-orientated rules has been increasingly palpable.

Moreover, social finance and the impact economy are currently at the very heart of the public debate, despite the relatively incipient legal framework specifically applicable to them, and brainstorming sessions are regularly held in this respect. The conversion of this critical mass into hard law and guidelines from public and private entities will be a trending topic for the foreseeable future.

Recommendations

Do you have any recommendations for legal models, fiscal treatment and public procurement in your jurisdiction in relation to social finance and purpose-driven companies? Do you see a need for regulatory intervention or is the market capable of self-regulation in these sectors?

Despite the fact that self-regulation has taken these sectors a long way, assertive regulatory intervention would certainly further the cause of social and purpose-driven companies and have a multiplying effect on their impact in the Portuguese economy and society as a whole.

For instance, the mandatory introduction of purpose in companies' articles of association and having their management regularly report and demonstrate in a detailed fashion how, and to what extent, their corporate purpose is being pursued would be a quantum leap for corporate law and a shift from a strictly shareholder-value approach to a purpose-driven approach.

It is also vital to rethink tax policy to develop a package of tax incentives for purpose-driven companies based on a holistic approach tailored to the features (and needs) of the Portuguese economy. This may include, among others, a comprehensive set of direct and indirect tax benefits that allows companies to reduce the costs of revamping their business model or productive structure in order to ensure increased compliance with ESG criteria. Furthermore, it is also important to create incentives for individuals to invest, via equity or debt, into purpose-driven companies.
